In this study, we have evaluated the effect of vaccination on the serological profile of puppies using the manual technique. Our results indicate that the incidence of false positive reactions (fever, skin lesions) in vaccinated puppies may be as high as 80%, an observation of clinical significance in a country where canine rabies is endemic, as it leads to unnecessary laboratory testing and to the unnecessary administration of anti-rabies vaccine.Studies on the sulfation of heparan sulfate using three radiolabeled precursors and gas chromatography of released, partially desulfated N-sulfated oligosaccharides. Heparan sulfate was prepared from ovine lung using 0.5 M aqueous sodium chloride as the desulfating agent in a wide range of specific activities and characterized by sodium dodecyl sulfate-polyacrylamide gel electrophoresis (SDS-PAGE) and fluorescein isothiocyanate (FITC)-labeled heparan sulfate-conjugated gelatin. This heparan sulfate can be used as substrate for the synthesis of
