Q: Scroll Out of Frame I have a UIViewController that adds another view to the screen via the following code:
self.navigationController.view.addSubview(originalViewController.view) However, when the user scrolls down, the added view appears partially scrolled out of view. How can I keep this view underneath the navigationBar that is at the top of the screen? A: If you are using a UINavigationController, simply add the UIViewController's view as a subview of the UINavigationController's view.

Q: Redirect / back to a string as optional argument in a link I would like to force users to visit a specific page when they access my website. The urls for this page looks like: www.example.com/index.php?page=this_is_the_page I would like to force that user to access the page this_is_the_page only if the link looks like this:
www.example.com/index.php?page=this_is_the_page&back=yes or like this:

Sidearm Accuracy: Take an extra moment to aim and pass the ball with more accuracy to keep it on the run forever. The longer you keep the ball, the more chance you'll have to score from open play. It's the little things that make the difference, and we've fine-tuned precision passing in FIFA 22 so you'll have more control over where your ball goes.

New Running Patterns: Add movement to the core of your player data. Switching the direction of movement from left to right and vice versa gives you total ball control. Shift the weight of your movement even closer to the ball and play with more of a smooth weight transfer for more power and control.

Dynamic Player Abilities: Play a three-on-three game with your friends and see who can make the most outrageous play! From rebounding off the head of a defender to giving chase down the pitch, dynamic interactions will keep things exciting.

New Rotation: Find the best new players for this year's FIFA Ultimate Team™ Draft and fight for the next great player.

New Player Career Progression: Continue to unlock the ways you can use your unique player attributes as you compete for that next star.

Matchday Presentation: Each matchday is presented in a new, fresh way. Experienced players will enjoy the many improvements to visual effects and commentary, while new players will learn the game through an improved matchday experience.

New Tactics Guide: Now you can play as a defending team and see how to pass your way out of trouble.

Match Improvements: Improved 3v3 gameplay and increased rewards for good play.

Improved Fan Interaction: Fans will have more ways to
