seen from the Daft Punk ad and the NFL as well. I will get into the larger conversation later on. I want to stress that this is a totally unofficial post and in no way the official stance of Unmentioned Media. None of the images or video used in this post are licensed to Unmentioned Media. All of the websites in this post have been found at large. We strive to provide the best amount of media when possible, but these posts are just a quick and lazy way of sharing more content related to the media we look at. The first thing we want to tackle is this weird ad between Daft Punk and the NFL. This ad was first posted to Facebook on November 27th. The post – which you can view here – is extremely short and just says: “For release 10/27/16. Daft Punk x NFL.” However, as the images below show – there is a real NFL team involved in this ad. Can you make out the name of the team on the sign pictured below? If you guessed the San Francisco 49ers, then congratulations, you’re right! This is a commercial for the NFL. We will get into the larger conversation about the Daft Punk x NFL commercial below. First, a quick background on the NFL. Major League Football is a league that consists of 5 teams: the Los Angeles Avengers, New York Dragons, Philadelphia Eagles, San Francisco 49ers, and St. Louis Battlehawks. The NFL is in its 33rd season and has been running since 2009. Each team plays a 14-game regular season which lasts from late August to early February of the
