Los Angeles is a huge city, and Midnight Club Los Angeles does a great job of showing it to you. The Los Angeles police department has only recently beefed up the security outside of this area, making it much safer than it once was. Los Angeles is a place that has its hands in so many different things, be it bookstores, art, museums, or even a high-speed rail system to connect all those places. However, the city is also full of people who are responsible for some truly wonderful things. The developers have done a terrific job of incorporating these within the game, and the world has been through a lot over the last few years, so the city still retains its classic charm. The buildings and overall look of the city is nice, and it almost looks as if you are driving through an actual city. Much of the effort has been given to making sure Los Angeles can be seen from the different neighborhoods, and there are a lot of places to see. It has a real Los Angeles feel about it, and the developers did a great job making sure this is a GTA-like open world. There's been lots of talk about whether Rockstar has any plans to create a sequel to Midnight Club Los Angeles, but it looks like that may be something they aren't interested in. Some of the answers given during the press conference made it sound as if this is the final chapter of the series. It's not surprising that the company isn't interested in making a sequel, because there's a lot of things to do in this game. Like in the older games, there are a lot of different cities and neighborhoods, with lots of unique things to see, and the world of Los Angeles isn't short on enemies either. There are some pretty good story missions, and there's plenty of fun to be had as you tear it up on the streets of Los Angeles in Midnight Club Los Angeles.
