a number is said to be palindromic if it reads the same forward and backward. palindromic numbers form a special subset of numbers that are sometimes called palindromic numbers. unfortunately they are very rare. if a number is palindromic then it is also a palindromic prime. the first palindromic prime is 9. the first one-sided prime is 2. the first palindromic prime that is also one-sided prime is 3. the first non-palindromic prime is 5. the first non-palindromic prime that is also one-sided prime is 7. the first non-palindromic prime that is not one-sided prime is 8. we know the order of the first 100 prime numbers. if we replace primes by the first n digits of the prime number, where n is the number of digits of the prime number, and the results are arranged in order of appearance, then the resulting sequence is called the n th lucas number. for example, the third lucas number is the fibonacci number. the n th lucas number is the number of dots in the n th row of a pascal's triangle. if we take the sum of the digits of the number n and subtract the number n from this sum, we get the sum of the digits of the number n . so the sum of the first n digits of the fibonacci numbers is the fibonacci number itself. if n is a fibonacci number and $n^2 + n + 1 = \text{fibonacci number}$, then n is called a fibonacci number of the second kind. a fibonacci number of the second kind of the number fibonacci is also a fibonacci number. the fibonacci sequence is known to be the sequence of the first n natural numbers that are one less than a square number and the n th lucas number is the number of dots in the n th row of a pascal's triangle.

Year-to-year death data for a given state can sometimes be affected by unexpectedly large numbers of death certificates with the underlying cause coded as other ill-defined and unspecified causes of mortality (ICD-10 code R99). Large year-to-year variations in state-specific injury-related death counts and/or rates for any reporting category defined by external-cause-of-injury or diagnosis codes can be evaluated in the context of accompanying year-to-year variations in the counts of death records with R99 as the underlying cause code (this information can be obtained using CDC WONDER:). Data on poisoning-related deaths for several states (NJ, OH, WV) and the District of Columbia are believed to have been particularly affected for reporting year 2009. However, users should remain alert to the possibility that data for other injury reporting categories, states, and/or years could also be affected.
