Along with the other Naga tribes, the Burmese also believe in the legend of the Neelkanth, a serpent, which is worshiped by the Nagas. According to the legend, the Neelkanth was once born from the head of the sage Vishweshwara and nursed by Goddess Saraswati. They say Saraswati would hold the Neelkanth in her lap but would always see it writhing and turn her head away from it. Later, when Saraswati's husband, Lord Shiva, saw the Naga serpent, he asked her to nurse it, and the Neelkanth, which was once, thereafter, named as Neel. This legend, however, is one of the reasons why the Nagas were under the umbrella of the British empire for centuries. Saraswati was an unmarried woman and was not of marriageable age when Shiva asked her to nurse the Neelkanth. Hence, the British rulers felt their allegiance towards the Nagas was strong. The Secret Of The Nagas In Hindi.pdf

Daksha is the Man that gave birth to Kuber and Shankar, the most powerful Deities amongst the Nagas. He destroyed the temple of Chinnamasta. He was also the one who killed Brahma, the Hindu God who created the Universe, during one of the battles between the Nagas and Devas in the Samvarana Mahamaterialization.

According to Sati, the entire creation was born because of the devas alone. The Nagas are not alone in their perception of the devas. Narada the messenger is sent by the devas to remind the Nagas of their identity. For the devas, there are only the Nagas. When Siva hears of Narada's presence, he goes to meet him. Narada continues to teach Siva about dharma and spirituality. While the Nagas and the devas had always lived together, the conflict between the two sides grew stronger.

At one point, Srihari, son of Narada, causes an entire forest to grow up so that he can block the path of the Nagas. The Nagas have created a secret place, Svargaloka, where they call themselves Devas and live together peacefully. They perceive themselves as beings of light, and not as Nagas. Srihari insults the entire Nagaloka by calling them as slaves. He tells them that they should, in fact, be worshiped. According to him, there are only the Nagas, and it is the responsibility of the devas to protect them from the ills of the world. They are therefore to be worshiped. On the other hand, the devas have yet to reach their spiritual quest and have not understood the sanctity of the human form. They have instead worshiped the form itself by presenting it with the status of God. The Nagas are unwilling to bow down to a human form. The Nagas perceive the human form as a demeaning tool of the devas to capture and assimilate the devas to themselves. The Nagas tell Siva and the devas that the devas would better worship the Nagas, and not each other. 5ec8ef588b
