REVIEW: It would be silly to try and cover all of the applications available for Windows. However, given that applications are available for nearly every version of the operating system, I decided to choose a few that I have used and have found to be useful. I am on the internet nearly every day, so I needed an application that would allow me to store my notes so that I could easily access them, as well as print them out. I needed an application that could store my to do list, checklists, source files, pictures and other files. I also needed a calendar and a journal that I could use as a work log. I found that I needed something that was less of a pain to use. Easy to use and basic: The application I chose is called Microsoft Office Home & Student 2010. It has a lot of wonderful features, but one of the best features is that it is simple to use. There are many applications that make it easy to use, but there are others that are too difficult. The one that I chose was the best because it was simple to use. It did all that I wanted it to do, and nothing more. So the next time I need to access a note that I took on my computer, I can easily find it. I would say it is very basic, but it does what it is supposed to do, and that is to be simple to use. Add to this a feature that many others have said they want, and that is multiple pages in the journal. This allows you to make entries for many days in a row. I have done this, and I love it because it allows me to make notes in a very quick manner and then add to them as the days progress. Another feature that I really enjoy about this software is that it keeps the pages clean of notes so that I can add notes to them. I love this feature because I am not allowed to add notes to my to do list, so I can keep it clean for work. I love that it is on the internet and that I can access it from any computer, anywhere. More than a word processor: Another great feature that I love about this software is that it is a word processor and not just a word processor. What I mean is that it allows me to use it to make presentations. This is a great feature because I do a lot of presentations at work. I do not want to use Microsoft Office because I do not have that program. This software does what I need it
